CUB SCOUT NEWS

The Cub Scout Committee met this past Tuesday night in order to plan Monday's Pack meeting. The Pack meeting will be at 7:00, Monday, Jan. 8, in the basement of the Methodist Church. The theme for this meeting is two-fold: musical instruments and the great cake-bake. All the Cubs are making musical instruments and they will be performing at the meeting. The great cake-bake is for Cubs and their dads—together they will bake a cake and these cakes will be auctioned off at the meeting. Cakes will be judged in four categories: largest, most original, prettiest, and best tasting. Sorry—no help from the mothers!!!

Pack meeting agenda: Pledge of Allegiance; Scout's Promise; Musical Show; General discussion of next Pack meeting; Cake awards; Auction of cakes; Closing—Law of the Pack.

Please come to our Pack meeting, bring the grandparents, or some friends. Remember, our success depends on you, the parents.

Thanks to my customers for their patronage during the last ten years. Effective Jan. 1, 1973, the business was sold to George Nickerson and we will be continuing to work together to provide the same dependable, efficient service.

COMMENTS FROM THE OFFICE OF THE TOWN MANAGER

The following is a partial copy of the law pertaining to forest landowners reports which must be submitted to the Forestry Dept.:

"Any owner of forest land who sells stumpage during a calendar year shall render an annual report to the commissioner during the month of January of the following year stating the species, volume and stumpage price per unit of measure of each transaction and the municipality or township where the stumpage was located."

There is a copy of the complete law in the town office, also the necessary forms are available to wood-land owners. Anyone who cuts wood for their own use must file these reports also. The information contained in them is not made public. It will be used by the State Tax Assessor.

Friday of last week the town received its first grant money from the state for the sewage program. It amounted to $56,345.00. We have had approval of $103,000.00 from federal funds.

SOCIAL SECURITY LAW

CHANGES DISABILITY

FILING RESTRICTION

Application for disability benefits may be filed after a worker's death under new provisions of the social security law, according to John M. Beale, social security district manager in Lewiston.

"This change won't effect many people, but it can be important to some families," Beale said. The provision will only apply in cases of deaths occurring after Dec. 31, 1969. But there is a deadline for filing such applications. In the future, survivors will have three months after a disabled worker's death to file an application for his retroactive disability insurance benefits, he explained. However, if the worker died in October 1972 or earlier, an application must be filed before Feb. 1, 1973.

Previously, applications for disability benefits had to be filed while the disabled worker were still alive. The change in the law will provide benefits to the survivors of workers who were severely disabled for six months before their death but for some reason didn't apply for benefits.

If it's found that the worker was eligible for disability payments, his survivors will be able to get retroactive disability payments as well as any survivors benefits that may be payable now or in the future," Beale said.

To get more information about payments for a period of disability before the disabled worker died, or to apply for benefits call, write, or visit the Social Security office at 265 Main Street, Lewiston. The phone number is 683-2223.

PELADÉAU TO ADDRESS LOCAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY THIS THURSDAY EVENING

The development of the Dr. Moses Mason House, now the home of the Bethel Historical Society, into one of northwestern Maine's premier historical sites will be the subject of a talk by Marius B. Peladeau, director of the Maine League of Historical Societies and Museums, before the local historical society at 7:30 this Thursday evening in the Case Bank and Trust building on Main Street.

Peladeau will touch upon how the famous house, now undergoing a careful restoration, can be developed into a valuable historical site and important tourist attraction for the Bethel community.

The house, which is a registered National Landmark, was built in 1813 by Dr. Moses Mason, a prominent Bethel citizen. The beautiful Federal period mansion, considered one of the most attractive in the northwest corner of the State, is noted for its fine exterior doorway, detailed interior woodwork, and painted folk-art murals by Jonathan D. Poor in the front hallway.

Mason went on to become a U. S. Congressman during the presidency of Andrew Jackson, and his house perfectly preserves a quality of life found in Maine during the first half of the 19th century.

Peladeau will touch upon possible methods of developing portions of the house into period rooms to illustrate this style of life. He will also discuss how other portions of the building could be used to display artifacts relating to old Bethel and the surrounding area, as well as other compatible uses for the building.

GREENWOOD CITY

— Mrs. Collis Morgan, Corres. —

The afternoon that I left on snowshoes the wind breathed softly from the west. The sun was over Patch Mountain for its first time in a week. How wonderful it looked in its bowl of purest blue.

The ledges at my left were sheathed in glistening ice, resembling a huge waterfall which stopped on its way down. Now and then the sun's blaze of light made scores of perfect miniature rainbows in a world of dazzling crystals.

Above the pond a plane streaked out of a cloud into clear air and silver light. It roared away over giant earth slumbering under a patchwork quilt of fields of soft white and forests of green. It followed over tall pines and low hills to look down on strangely silent regions such as the bogs and swamps.

The old fence rails were a thing of rustic beauty. Their serpentine forms were like strange writings in the snow. Were I an artist I'd paint these fences, weather worn yet standing in dignity.

Moving on down the pond I kept well south of the Sanborn River the mouth of which might be unsafe.

When I reached the far shore I stopped and was greeted by the sharp dry rustle of the withered beech leaves. This was the voice of the woods. It rose and fell as does the surf of the sea; welling up then dying down.

The landscape looked clean and the air like pure glass while the trees were so tidy stripped of their leaves; looking down at winter, the iron age of the year.

I left the pond for the hemlock clad hill with its woodland symphony. To the right was a bluff coming over the wooded hills. It wore a cap of gray granite, several pines on top, and above all one gray cloud like a plume of smoke.

The way was mine to choose. So up the hill I climbed through the over-arching branches whispering softly as they bent down.

Just at the peak of the hill was the sun; its golden face gleaming from a gorgeous throne that was all its own; guiding me on.

At the crest of the hill I looked down into a valley of silence; so still that it seemed I must hear the rabbits breathe. This was truly Bunny Valley. There were so many tracks, yet not a bunny in sight!

I stood for some time viewing my surroundings while trees cast flitting shadows which frolicked and danced in the breeze filling the hollows of the sunlit snow.

A turn left revealed an unexpected lane down an archway of invisible mystery. I followed through when though the snow came down like rain; my reward for going through this covered route; probably a bunny trail.

Suddenly from above came the animal acrobat of this small world, yes down, bushy tail in the air.

trying my heart to ensnare, he was alert and wise, this squirrel friend. Then with eagerness he went on his way.

I now thought that I heard the sound of running water so I went on to see. Sure enough, there was a brook that I had never before seen. Possibly it may be temporary because of winter rains. As I drew near, it gurgled a conversation in undertones through a natural bridge. Numerous little mosses and ferns peeped from under the bank. This dark-eyed water was full of content and promise as it hurried on. My errand was to follow it and see where it entered the pond. I did and was surprised to find it was at a place where many times I have sat and fished but I had never noticed it. I shall again look when summer comes.

Turning up pond now along the shore I faced an area of dazzling winter landscape. The pond had little wavy lines all over which reminded me of a frosted cake. Beyond the fields were the foot hills and beyond them were the mountains. A golden glow rimmed the western horizon for the sun was dipping behind the mountains that circled the valley. The winter twilight was coming now, coming fast. I turned right and climbed the bank, crossed the road, then went over the bank to the lower driveway which we do not keep open in winter.

Our house seemed to sit in a saucer with snow-covered mountains on two sides.

A woodpecker shot past and alighted on a dead elm close by. Instantly I heard its tapping. The chickadees gathered and I thought; Here the chickadees come, my cabin stands Untenanted, waiting and alone; Around, a temporary stillness—spans.

But it welcomes me—I call it home.

TAXPAYERS ASK I.R.S.

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U. S.
Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q) My son earned nearly $2,000
last year. Does he have to file a Federal income tax return?

A) If your son is single, you are not claiming him as a dependent and he did not have self employment earnings of $400 or more, he does not have to file a return because his gross income is less than $2050. However, if you or someone else could claim your son as a dependent and he had income from dividends, interest or other types of unearned income, he must file a return if his gross income was at least $750. He must also file a return if he had net self-employment earnings of $400 or more.

Of course, he should file a return to claim any refund due him for income tax withheld.

Q) I have all my tax records. Can
I file without my Form W-2?

A) No. A withholding statement, Form W-2, for each job held during the year.

HOUSE PAINT OVER
20 YEARS OLD MAY BE DANGEROUS TO CHILDREN
"Houses built before 1932 ar-
sources of lead poisoning for chilren," warns Miss Susan Ringer, Director of Lead Screening Program for Maine Bureau of Health. Since 1932 paint manufacturers have untilly stopped supplying lead base
paints to home builders.

The state's lead screening program has been operating since July, 1972. To date, approximately 1,000
pre-school children, age one through six, have been tested. Ten per cent were found to have abnormally high lead levels in their blood. Four children have been hospitalized for extremely high lead levels.

When the lead screening program
finds a child with high lead content
in his blood, a nurse or health worker notifies the family and provides whatever assistance is required.
Another test is performed and a health engineer from the Bureau of Health examines the home to determine the lead source, which is usually the interior paint. A child is affected usually by the family
and treatment is begun if necessary.

Children from low income families are most frequently the victims of lead poisoning, but it is not a poor economic indicator. A child who was recently found to have lead poisoning. The doctor had a note in the file showing the child lead paint caused the child to get lead poisoning.
